About the Author

Frances Roark Dowell was an American author who wrote over 50 books for children and young adults. She was born in Waynesville, North Carolina, in 1913. Dowell's parents were both teachers, and she grew up in a small town where she was surrounded by books. She began writing at a young age, and her first novel, The Starling, was published in 1941.

Dowell's books often dealt with themes of race, poverty, and social justice. She was a strong advocate for civil rights, and her work helped to raise awareness of the struggles faced by African Americans in the United States. Dowell's books have been translated into over 20 languages and have sold millions of copies worldwide.

Dowell died in 1995, but her legacy lives on through her books. She is considered one of the most important authors of children's literature in the United States, and her work continues to inspire and educate young readers today.
