Two thousand years after the events of Adrian Tchaikovsky's Children of Time, humanity has spread to the stars, but Earth is a very different place. The planet is now home to a thriving civilization of intelligent spiders, who have evolved from the genetically engineered spiders that were left behind after the humans left.

The humans and the spiders have lived in uneasy coexistence for centuries, but tensions are rising. The humans are determined to reclaim Earth as their own, while the spiders are equally determined to protect their home. As the two sides prepare for war, a young human woman named Kira Navárez finds herself caught in the middle. Kira is a brilliant scientist who has spent her life studying the spiders. She believes that the two species can live together in peace, but she knows that time is running out.

As the conflict between the humans and the spiders escalates, Kira must race against time to find a way to save both species. She knows that the future of Earth depends on it.
