About Fyodor Dostoyevsky

Fyodor Dostoyevsky (1821-1881) was a Russian novelist, short story writer, and philosopher. Born in Moscow, he endured a tumultuous childhood marked by poverty and the death of his mother at a young age.

After a brief stint in the military, Dostoyevsky turned to writing. His early works, including Poor Folk and The Double, established him as a rising star in Russian literature. However, his outspoken views on social and political issues led to his arrest and exile to Siberia.
